Policies in relation to Modern Slavery

As part of our broad effort to integrate respect for human rights into the Firm, Siguler Guff has various policies and procedures designed to prevent our products and services from being used for improper purposes. These include:

A responsible investing culture highlighted by an investment discipline that integrates environmental, social and corporate governance (“ESG”) factors into the investment process, including sourcing, due diligence, negotiation of terms and conditions, monitoring of fund compliance and remedial action, if and when required. Siguler Guff defines ESG issues to include (i) credible allegations or findings (including allegations or findings by regulatory or law enforcement agencies, allegations contained in news accounts and allegations reported by whistleblowers) that a fund investment or a portfolio company in which one of the Firm's funds has invested has materially violated any law or regulation relating to: protection of the environment; worker safety; fair wages and working conditions; collective bargaining; unlawful discrimination; child or forced labor; bribery or corruption; or product or drug safety, or (ii) any of the aforementioned allegations or findings regarding a company that is a material link in the supply chain of the Firm and with which the Firm has a direct supply chain relationship.

Policies and procedures pertaining to anti-bribery and corruption, anti-money laundering ("AML"), and know your customer ("KYC") due diligence. For example, as part of its due diligence process, the firm checks for portfolio companies whose financial activity may show involvement in human trafficking and communicates actionable information directly to law enforcement. In addition, the firm's business principles and Code of Ethics communicate the firm's expectations that business be conducted ethically and in compliance with the law.

Siguler Guff treats malpractice or impropriety very seriously. As part of our corporate culture, it is important that employees are encouraged and feel supported in speaking up about their concerns and the firm aim to provide a culture where everyone feels confident to do so. Siguler Guff maintains a whistleblowing policy to encourage employees or third parties to raise any concerns confidentially.

As part of its ESG policy, Siguler Guff maintains a responsible investment policy and has an ESG Committee (the "Committee") comprising key professionals across the Firm's investment, marketing, investor relations, and legal/compliance teams. The Committee reviews the Firm's ESG policies and discusses the management of any ESG issues identified.

Risk Assessment and Due Diligence

Siguler Guff incorporates ESG considerations into its investment activities and seeks to capture the value and mitigate the risks related to these facts. Siguler Guff is proud to be a signatory to the United Nations Principles for Responsible Investment ("UNPRI") and regards UNPRI as a key framework for implementing ESG considerations into its investment due diligence process.

The Firm follows due diligence procedures to assess human rights, ethical and environmental risks when sourcing suppliers. Our major suppliers and contractual arrangements with our material suppliers are reviewed to ensure they continue to have sufficient procedures in place against slavery and human trafficking in their business or supply chain. The due diligence process includes verifying that they have sufficient policies and procedures in place to ensure fair treatment and pay for employees, adequate whistleblowing procedures and confirming that all those employed in the provision of services have the necessary documentation to legally work in the UK. If we become aware of any allegations of modern slavery or human trafficking activities against any of our suppliers, we will take appropriate action depending on the nature of the incident. This may include engaging with the supplier to ensure they investigate the issue, accessing victim support to protect any modern slavery victims and reporting it to the authorities where appropriate.

Training on modern slavery and trafficking

Where relevant to their line of business and function, employees receive training on policies and procedures that pertain to products and services we provide to our clients. This includes training on the ethical principles in our Code of Ethics as well as the firm's Anti-Bribery and Corruption, AML and KYC policies and practices. All newly hired employees are assigned Code of Ethics training and current employees are assigned training on an ongoing basis. Employees are periodically required to affirm their compliance with the Code of Ethics. Siguler Guff is committed to ensuring its employees understand and are aware of their responsibilities in relation to modern slavery.

Siguler Guff will continue to comply with the requirements of the UK MSA and uphold its commitment to enforcing a robust policy designed to prevent violations involving slavery and human trafficking.
